Maria Geroulia holds a BSc in Sociology from the University of the Aegean and an MSc in European Societies and European Integration from the University of the Aegean. She is currently a Master's student at the Hellenic Open University.

She has extensive experience in project management of EU co-funded programmes, with a strong focus on Europe Direct and Jean Monnet / Erasmus+ initiatives.

Since March 2024, she is a member of the Marine Remote Sensing Group (MRSG) of the University of the Aegean, providing administrative and project management support, coordination of project activities, communication and dissemination tasks.

Since 2013, she has been actively involved in the management of Europe Direct Northern Aegean, undertaking responsibilities related to the administrative, financial and operational coordination of the project, as well as the organisation of public events, conferences and dissemination activities addressing European policies and citizens' engagement.